閱讀測驗

占每年統測考試的 20%，目的在測驗考生對文章的理解，題目常考「文章的主旨」或 best title（最佳標題）、「綜理解題（文章內容的細節，選出不對的敘述）」，所以除了平時需多閱讀英文文章培養閱讀能力之外，另可用下列 3 點小技巧幫助自己，提升此大題的應答能力喔！

Water is a major component of the human body. Lack of water can affect bodily functions. The body continuously loses water through daily activities and must make up for this loss through food such as fruits and vegetables, and beverages such as milk and soda. Water, which is calorie free, is the healthiest drink.

Men need 13 cups of water per day and women need nine. Water requirements depend on activity levels, climate, and health. If you are doing exercise, you need to drink an extra two cups of water. For intense exercise, such as marathon running or road cycling, you need even more. Sports drinks are one way to replace water and sodium lost through sweat. In hot and dry weather, the body must have enough water to keep cool. Furthermore, in mountains of over 2500 meters, people breathe faster, so they require five cups of water more than usual.

People suffering from fever should also take in additional fluids to balance water loss. Pregnant or breast-feeding women need large amounts of water, too. Doctors advise mothers-to-be to drink ten cups of water daily and women who are breast-feeding 14 cups per day. All in all, water needs differ according to various factors and drinking proper amounts of water is key to good health. 【105年統測】
